District news for faculty and staff

May 5, 2017

Dear Friends and Colleagues,

You just have to love this time of the year.

Students, faculty and staff all have their eye on the proverbial finish line: May 26 when we celebrate the achievements and accomplishments of the graduating Class of 2017.

As we approach the end of this academic year, two words come to mind: Thank you.

Our dedicated faculty has prepared, tested, and encouraged our students. Academic advisors, financial aid officers, and others have stayed "student-success-centered," despite competing deadlines and priorities.

The families and friends who have cheered, supported, paid, worried, laughed and cried with our students over the years are deeply thanked. It takes a "community" of support for our students to succeed -- they, and we, could not succeed without you.

In doing our part, we are all shaping the future -- of our students, our region, and our state. That's why I'd like to invite you to make an even greater impact and join me and the California Community Colleges Chancellor's Office for a virtual town hall.

We need your innovative ideas to develop a long-term, ambitious vision for the CCC system -- the largest system of higher education in the nation.

The strategic vision will articulate clear goals for the system and provide recommendations for how to accomplish those goals over the next five years. The resulting document will be presented to the CCC Chancellor and Board of Governors in July, 2017.

All Californians—including current students, alumni, and community members—are invited to share their thoughts to improve the ways our colleges serve the community by visiting the Strategic Vision 2017 page. Responses will be collected until May 31, 2017.

I also invite you to email me at bbaron@sbccd.edu to continue this chat by sharing an idea or comment.

Onward,

Chancellor Bruce Baron

Say goodbye to HR and payroll paperwork, find out how

The moment that everyone has been waiting for is finally here. Let's say goodbye to HR and payroll paperwork. SBCCD is adopting a better, smarter and easier way to give employees 24/7 online and mobile app access to their pay statements, earnings, direct deposits, benefits, coverage levels, vacation accrual, work schedule and performance reviews. "Less paperwork means we can focus on what really matters: Making a difference for our students," said Chancellor Bruce Baron. The new HR and payroll system will be powered by ADP software, and will be fully implemented by July 2018. In-person training workshops start this month at CHC, SBVC and the District office. More than 200 faculty and staff members have already sign up for a workshop. Workshops are filling up fast, to save your seat select your location:

Teaming up with SB Mayor to boost local, global business-education partnerships

SBCCD signed a ceremonial "Declaration of Innovative Collaboration" with Creative Young Community, a Chinese government-sponsored business accelerator with a goal to build 30 incubators in 30 cities throughout China by 2018. San Bernardino Mayor Carey Davis, SBCCD Chancellor Bruce Baron and the SBCCD Board of Trustees welcomed the business delegation on April 27 at the Norton Regional Event Center, adjacent to the San Bernardino International Airport. The declaration of innovative collaboration is an initiative of SBCCD's Economic Development & Corporate Training Foundation as the first of many future conversations with Creative Young Community to explore business-education partnerships to help local and international entrepreneurs grow their business and create jobs for young people.

Building civically engaged students: Secretary of State Alex Padilla speaks at KVCR-TV student town hall

California's chief elections officer, Secretary of State Alex Padilla, recently visited the KVCR studio to tape a TV town hall hosted by the Crafton Hills College and San Bernardino Valley College Associated Student Governments. During his visit, Padilla thanked SBCCD for being the first and only community college in the Inland Empire to team up with his office to register people to vote in the 2016 elections. "By working together, now California has a new voter registration record: more than 19.4 million people are on the voting rolls," he said. Padilla urged students to register even if they are not yet old enough to vote. In March, California launched online pre-registration for 16- and 17-year-olds. By doing so, their voter registration is automatically activated once they turn 18. Young adults from the surrounding community, including some from Rialto Unified School District and Middle College High School, made up the all-student audience and engaged in a Q&A session with Secretary Padilla.

Statement by the Chancellor on the passing of Al Karnig, former Cal State San Bernardino president

"Al was a visionary leader with an educator's heart – always kind, generous and devoted to lifting up anyone who needed a helping hand. He was always a great partner of the San Bernardino Community College District and our two campuses – Crafton Hills College and San Bernardino Valley College – and most recently, he served on the KVCR Educational Foundation Board. We will deeply miss him and will always remember the difference he made in our lives and our entire region. Our hearts, thoughts, and prayers go out to his wife Marilyn, his family and everyone who loved him."
