Dangerous Driving Habits

1. Driving under the influence of drugs and alcohol

The majority of traffic-related deaths are caused by drunk drivers. It's a well-known fact that alcohol impairs your ability to drive, and more importantly, to react. So follow common-sense guidelines like taking a taxi or using a designated driver if you're planning a booze-fueled night on the town. Doing so can avoid tragic consequences. As laws governing the use of marijuana become relaxed in some places, it too has the potential to become a bigger part of the traffic accident statistical mix. You may think you're good at driving high, but chances are that you aren't.

2. Driving tired

Drowsy driving is every bit as dangerous as drunk driving. When your body needs sleep, it's going to get it, one way or another. People who insist on driving when they should stop for a rest will have slower reaction times and are likely to fall asleep at the wheel. The results usually aren't pretty. Drivers who are sleepy or asleep tend to crash on high-speed roads, and they usually don't do anything to avoid the crash in the moments before impact. The problem is such that some luxury automakers have introduced driver aids intended to combat drowsy driving. So if you feel yourself nodding off, pull off the road and grab a few Zs someplace safe. You might get home later than planned, but that's a small trade-off for your safety and that of the drivers sharing the road with you

3. Speeding

Speeding is the second leading cause of traffic fatalities after drunk driving. According to a 2014 study by the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety, "The relationship between vehicle speed and crash severity is unequivocal and based on the laws of physics." There you have it: the faster you go, the more likely it is you'll be pulverized in a crash. Even though they may sometimes feel arbitrary, posted speed limits exist for a reason.

4. Distracted driving

You know the drill. Shave/put your makeup on at home, and turn off the cell phone while you're driving. NHTSA estimates that there are 660,000 distracted drivers on the road most of the time.

5. Driving too fast for the weather conditions

When the weather gets bad, slowing down is the best way to avoid an accident. This goes back to that physics thing. Unfortunately, not everyone gets that. All-wheel drive isn't an excuse for driving fast in inclement weather. When the road surface is slippery, a 3,500- to 5,000-pound vehicle will probably skid if you need to slow down in a hurry. According to the Federal Highway Administration, 24 percent of all vehicle crashes are weather related. That's a good reason to slow down and leave a little space between your car and the one in front.

6. Reckless Driving

Many states consider driving 20 mph or more over the speed limit reckless driving, which carries heavy penalties in the form of fines, jail time, or a combination thereof. This goes back to predictability. If your movements in traffic are drastically different than those of other drivers, you're more likely to cause an accident.

7. Not wearing a seat belt

According to NHTSA, seat belts saved more than 75,000 lives between 2008 and 2013. Airbags certainly make cars safer, but they're designed to work in conjunction with seat belts, which help prevent passenger ejection during high speed crashes and rollovers.
