5 Things

You Should Always Have In Your Home

September is National Preparedness Month. Observe this event by making sure your home is always stocked with the following 5 items:

 Always choose electric lanterns over candles for emergency lighting. Candles are a serious fire hazard, and lanterns are more luminescent. Stock at least one lantern per person in the family, or enough to light up every room in the house.	 Safety experts suggest having at least one fire extinguisher for each level of the home. Priority areas include the kitchen, near the front and rear entrances of the home, and in garages and workrooms.
 Store important documents such as birth certificates and passports in a safe. Safes should be rated for 30 minutes of fire protection and be capable of maintaining an internal heat no higher than 350° Fahrenheit.	 Keep pants, long-sleeve shirts, rain gear, plastic sheets, extra blankets, sturdy shoes, and warm clothing stocked. The goal is to stay dry and warm while also moving safely throughout the home in the event of a flood or blizzard.

Store canned foods, a manual can opener, extra batteries, a 7-day supply of medication, first-aid kit, flashlight, sanitary items, hand-crank radio and other must-haves in a kit. Additionally, always have at least one gallon of water for each member of the household at the ready. Three-day supplies are recommended for evacuation situations, and store two-week supplies in the house.
