Creating A Healthy Environment to Promote Sober College Life

1,825 college students between the ages of 18 and 24 die from alcohol-related unintentional injuries, including motor vehicle crashes.

599,000 students between the ages of 18 and 24 are unintentionally injured under the influence of alcohol.

How can we help prevent this:

Pay careful attention to environmental factors on campus and in the community. They are extremely important in influencing college drinking behaviors both positively and negatively.

Actively enforce existing age 21 laws on campus; they help decrease alcohol consumption.

Use social norms interventions to correct misperceptions and change drinking practices. When discussing college drinking problems, do not inadvertently reinforce the notion that hazardous drinking is the norm. Help students understand that they have the right not to drink and to have negative feelings about the consequences they experience due to other students' excessive drinking.

Communicate the institution's, the community's, and the State's alcohol policies to students and parents before and after students arrive on campus.
