CRIME MAPPING™ building safer communities

Geography has a major influence on crime. The features and characteristics of cityscapes and rural landscapes can make it easier or more difficult for crime to occur. The placement of alleys, buildings and open spaces, for example, affects the likelihood that a criminal will strike.

Combining geographic data with police report data and then displaying the information on a map is an effective way to analyze where, how and why crime occurs.

Computerized crime maps became more commonplace with the introduction of desktop computing and software programs called Geographic Information Systems (GIS). Analysts map where crime occurs, combine the resulting visual display with other geographic data (such as location of schools, parks and industrial complexes), analyze and investigate the causes of crime, and develop responses. Recent advances in statistical analysis make it possible to add more geographic and social dimensions to the analysis.

The San Bernardino Community College District Police website allows staff, students, and employees to take advantage of Crime mapping. Giving you the ability to stay updated and informed on what crimes are taking place within the vicinity of the campuses or any location you desire by entering the address.
