CAMPUS SAFETY

FIGHTING BACK AGAINST SEXUAL VICTIMIZATION

Making attempts to prevent sexual harassment is an important component to campus safety. Sexual harassment, in a legal sense, covers any unwelcome verbal or physical sexual advances. Most situations of sexual misconduct on college campuses come from an individual that the victim already knows and has some sort of relationship with. This relationship, however, can be an advantage in preventing or stopping sexual harassment.

Your biggest advantage is taking control of the situation when you can. By being assertive and making it known that explicit comments and/or suggestions are not welcome, you have the potential to diffuse a possible situation before it begins. If you can deliver this message in an e-mail or have some other record of your request, this is also helpful. Additionally, making your friends aware of the situation is also advantageous. They may be able to help you with advice or work with you to deliver your message of disdain toward someone making sexual advances. In the unfortunate event of a physical assault, your friends will be better able to help you in legal proceedings.

You should also alert campus safety to the issue and request their help. College is a time of exploring new freedoms; don't let another person's unwelcome advances get in the way of your personal growth. Fight back.

MISSION STATEMENT

The SBCCD Police Department, in concert with the Board of Trustees, is committed to providing a safe and secure learning and working environment for all students and employees. This will be accomplished through a cooperative and coordinated effort involving all departments and the SBCCD employees, law enforcement agencies and community.
