Students Taking On Prevention

Schools and college campuses, where young adults spend part or all of their day—are often assumed to be safe places. Yet young adults still experience and witness numerous acts of violence in their schools, negatively affecting their emotional security and education. Amongst these acts of violence are fighting, bullying, property crime and even sexual violence or assault. Many students feel unsafe in schools because of their sexual orientation, yet they often hesitate to report harassment to school officials. School violence is an ageless act and happens more often than notice. Stop the violence with educating yourselves with your surroundings and taking notice of the statistics in and around your school area. Crime occurs on and off the campus properties.

- In 2010, 92,695 crimes were reported to college and university campus police. Of these reported crimes, 97 percent were property crimes, and 3 percent were violent crimes.
- Of the violent crimes reported on college and university campuses, 53 percent were aggravated assaults, 29 percent were robberies, 18 percent were forcible rapes, and 0.2 percent were murder or non-negligent manslaughter.
- In nearly three-quarters of the incidents (73 percent) of targeted violence on college and university campuses, subjects targeted one or more specifically names individuals.
- From 1909-2008, a majority of incidents of targeted violence occurred on campus (79 percent) while approximately one-fifth were off campus. When incidents occurred inside a campus owned/operated building, more than one-half took place
