Professional Development Day (FLEX DAY)
LEARN.CONNECT.SHARE.

Understanding and Engaging Under-resourced College Students (9am-noon)
Location: Library Viewing Room
--Coffee and Pastries Included--

This workshop will look at the influence economic class has on teaching and learning in higher education. The needs of students experiencing poverty can greatly affect their ability to master the college environment. Participants will learn to:

- Recognize the impact of economic class on student preparedness and educational success
- Build on students' existing resources, experiences, and abilities
- Improve effectiveness through curriculum design and programming
- Ensure academic success for the vast majority of those who enter college

There is a way to put students in the role of knowledge creator, build on their skills and resources they bring to the table, and invite them to take an active role in the larger campus community.
