Guided Pathways Presentation and Discussion (10:00am-3:00pm)

Location: B 100

--Lunch is provided during this session--

What is guided pathways? Why should I care about guided pathways? Isn't this just another initiative? How will it affect students? What will it do to my college? Will it look different at SBVC and CHC? What is my role in this new effort? If you have asked yourself any of the questions (and even if you haven't), we invite you to join us in exploring the what, why, and how of guided pathways. In this workshop, we will cover key concepts in guided pathways, investigate data that makes the case for guided pathways, and discuss how to make the implementation efforts sustainable by integrating them with your participatory governance structure. Please join us for this interesting and interactive workshop.

Presenters:

Janet Fulks is a Biology professor at Bakersfield College who asked all of the questions above and who worked with faculty to understand impacts and implications of the data and the framework behind guided pathways thinking. She knows for a fact that each college has its own challenges and strengths and needs to create a guided pathways model unique to that college, its mission and student population. Janet served on many statewide committees including Basic Skills, CCCCO Scorecard, Noncredit Taskforce, Curriculum, AB705 and currently serves as the ASCCC Guided Pathways Capacity Building Faculty Lead.

Julie Bruno is a Communication Studies professor at Sierra College, which initiated an individual college approach to guided pathways in 2015. In serving as president for the Academic Senate for California Community Colleges for the past two years, Julie has been working with faculty leaders across the state as they have struggled with the challenges and embraced the opportunities inherent in implementing a guided pathways framework. She is convinced that sustainability and progress in guided pathways models come only with a collaborative culture and a strong commitment to participatory governance and collegial consultation. As the immediate past president of ASCCC, Julie continues to be involved with the organization in a variety of roles including serving as the Guided Pathways Coordination and Communication Faculty Lead.
